

GOVERNOR SAYS HE WILL PARDON HAINS THIS WEEK

Slayer of Annis Will Owe His Liberty to the Efforts of His Father.

Telegraphic information came today to Warden John B. Kennedy at Sing Sing prison that Gov. Dix had granted a pardon to Peter C. Hains Jr., formerly captain in the United States Coast Artillery, who was serving an indeterminate sentence of fourteen years for killing William E. Annis at the Bayview Yacht Club in August, 1908.

The telegram came from Asa Bird Gardiner, counsel for Hains. The Warden said that he would not convey the information to Hains until he was officially notified by the Governor. The official information is expected during the day.

In anticipation of the release of his brother, Thornton Jenkins Hains went early today to the Sing Sing prison. He said that he would stay with his brother and start with him to make a new place in life.

"We will go first to Washington, D. C.," said Thornton. "To see his mother and his three little children, who have been with his mother since he was sent to prison. Then it may be that we will go to South America for a new start. I think that is what Pete wants to do, but I believe that he should apply for reinstatement in the navy."

"His story has never been all told. We couldn't put him on the stand at his trial because they would have sent him to Matamoras for life if we had. When he tells what he can tell he will put the killing of Annis in an entirely different light."

BROTHER SAYS HE WILL STICK TO BROTHER TO END.

"But we are going to stick together and I am going to stay with him until the end, no matter what he wants to do."

Hains is now thirty-nine years of age. He has been in the prison since May 11, 1908, and has been employed nearly all of that time as an electrical engineer. His knowledge of electricity and of engineering made him a most valuable man for the prison officials.

Gen. Peter C. Hains, U. S. A., retired, has for months been trying to obtain a pardon for his son, and several petitions have been signed and presented to the Governor, the last being one signed by the jurymen who convicted Hains, a majority of whom said they did not think he would receive such a severe sentence, and believed he had paid the full penalty.

Capt. Hains obtained a divorce from Claudia Hains last month, the custody of the children being awarded to Gen. Hains. Annis was named as co-respondent, and testimony was offered that Mrs. Hains, now living with her family near Boston, had not denied the charges.

"I feel convinced after reading the additional affidavits that have been submitted to me that Capt. Peter C. Hains Jr. is entitled to executive clemency," said Gov. Dix today in commenting on the application made to him for the pardon of the slayer of William E. Annis.

The Governor said he expected to grant the pardon this week.

GIANT IS ROBBED, FEARS TO GO HOME

A man six feet four inches tall, brown and tanned by exposure to the weather, with feet as big as boxing gloves, entered the East Twenty-second street station house today and reported that he had been robbed. Lieut. O'Connor asked for particulars and the giant, who said he was Morgan C. Richards, an iron worker of No. 197 West One Hundred and Thirtieth street, told of being held up by six men at Twenty-fourth street and First avenue.

"I had just left a saloon," said Richards, "and they followed me. They ripped out my right hip pocket and stole $2. Now, I don't mind losing the money so much, but my wife won't believe it. I want you to telephone her that I've been robbed and then send a detective out with me to try and get the money back."

"Why don't you telephone yourself?" asked Lieut. O'Connor.

"I'd rather you'd telephone," said Richards, fumbling his hat. "My number is 198 Morningside."

O'Connor rang up the number. A woman answered the call. Her tone was sharp and snappy.

"Well, the big loafer," she ejaculated when O'Connor had described by his thrilling attention to detail how an army of men had attacked her husband and robbed him. "Why didn't he come home instead of hanging around a saloon. If he's there tell him I said I want to talk to him."

Richards approached the telephone with all the enthusiasm of a man about to pick up a rattlesnake. "Yes, dear," he murmured at intervals while the snappy tones of Mrs. Richards conveyed to him certain information that caused his eyes to roll and his lips to tremble.

"Here," he whispered to O'Connor, "you take the phone and call her off." O'Connor listened. Mrs. Richards was telling what she intends to do to her glaucous husband if he comes home without the money.

"I guess the only thing for me to do is go out and get it back," said the giant, despondently. Lieut. O'Connor assigned Detective Burke, who is five feet six inches tall to go with Richards in quest of the $2.

"We will go first to Washington, D. C.," said Thornton. "To see his mother and his three little children, who have been with his mother since he was sent to prison. Then it may be that we will go to South America for a new start. I think that is what Pete wants to do, but I believe that he should apply for reinstatement in the navy."

Policeman Ward of the Sanitary Squad saw Campbell Carnegie of No. 123 Clinton avenue, Bronx, spitting on the sidewalk of the Brooklyn Bridge plaza today and arrested him. On the way to the Tombs Court, the prisoner told the policeman his name.

"Any relation to Andy?" asked the policeman, jokingly.

"Yap," said the young man, and then asked hopefully: "Does that make any difference?"

"Not for you," said Ward, sadly, "but it may for me."

Magistrate Murphy grinned appreciatively when young Carnegie, with a long face, confessed that the charge against him was true.

"I fine you $1," he said. "I guess Carnegie can pay that for having forgotten himself."

The young man's face grew longer. He searched his pockets and brought out 60 cents.

The attendant started him for the prison pen to serve out his day of imprisonment.

"Bring him back," ordered Magistrate Murphy. "Many a time I have been caught without a dollar in my clothes."

"Young man," he said, when Carnegie was again before him, "where do you work?"

"Commercial Printing Company, No. 8 Hookman street," was the reply.

"When do you get paid?"

"Monday."

"Then I will parole you in your own custody until Monday afternoon," said the Magistrate. "You must come in and pay the dollar, then, or else I shall have to pay it myself."

Fervently thanking the Court, the steel-master's cousin went his way.

No Extra Charge for It.

TALE OF THE SUMMER

At the tail end of the summer when your trunk was one of a hundred thousand dumped into New York, did you pause to think that there might be a better way—something more satisfactory than two short weeks out of each year for real fun and outdoor living?

To own a Little Farm at Annadale, Staten Island, New York City, means summer-long vacations for your family—a bit of vacation each week for you—the perfect plan for an economic living—a place with your garden and fruit trees, where you can live the year around if you like—a Country Club and a bathing beach nearby. You can get one for but little more each year than your summer outing now costs.

It is an economy, a pleasure and an investment in health and real estate. The cost averages $69
